Supplementary information; Son of Paul Antoine Charrier; husband of Annie Logan Charrier, of "Cliffsend," Bembridge, Isle of Wight. Served in the Ashanti Expedition and South African Campaign.

From 'Irish at the Front'; Retreat from Mons, page 23; -...until it came to bayonet fighting between khaki and grey, and then the air was rent with yells of rage and hate, shrieks of pain, and the low wailing of the Irish keen. During the retirement a despatch-rider reached the Munsters. He had a message for them to retire "at once." It was not timed, but it was probably the last of the three orders sent from headquarters, and was therefore written hurriedly/ It seems also to have been written many hours before it was delivered, as the bearer said he had been compelled to hide for a long time from the Germans. But it was too late. The Munsters were encircled by a ring of fire. The enemy had worked round to their rear and now barred the way to the village of Etreux. Major Paul Charrier, described as a hearty, genial Kerryman, was in command of the Munsters. Three times he gallantly led his men in an attack upon the key of the German position, a large mansion that was loopholed and turned into a fortress. He was twice wounded, yet he continued to lead, and in the last assault he fell to rise no more with a bullet in his head.

Complexion, dark. Eyes, blue. Hair, dark. Listed missing in action, later changed to killed in action after a Court of enquiry in Belgium. Margaret (mother) and Michael (father) each received a pension of 20 shillings per fortnight from August-1917.

A statement concerning his death was made by Lieutenant Linnott;

'I was O.C. of a daylight raid on 14-June-1917 near Messines. Pte Clifford D.M. was one of the members of my platoon on this occasion; after entering the Bosche trenches Pte Clifford D.M. was shot through the legs near the buttock, he was helped over the parapet, given instructions to make his way to our trenches as quickly as possible he made off and that was the last seen of him. He was rather badly hit, I did not expect him to get right back to our trenches without help so, intended picking him up on our way back. I had a thorough look among the killed lying in No Man's Land but could not locate Clifford so reported him missing when I came in. An intense barrage was put down on No Man's Land by the Bosche during the whole time the stunt was going on and this had to be passed through before anyone could regain our own trenches, probably this would have some bearing on the disappearance of Clifford.' Dated at Larkhill this 31st Day of August, 1917. Another statement by Sergeant Yule; 'On the 5th of June, 1917 Pre Clifford was in a daylight raid to the right of Messines made by the 44th Battalion. He was believed to have been shot by a German at the door of the dugout but nothing really definite could be found out so that he may be prisoner but the fellows in his squad who came back reckoned he had been killed.' On the 5th of June, 1917 Pre Clifford was in a daylight raid to the right of Messines made by the 44th Battalion. He was believed to have been shot by a German at the door of the dugout but nothing really definite could be found out so that he may be prisoner but the fellows in his squad who came back reckoned he had been killed.'

Another report by Pte Smith J;- 'On June 6th in raid Plugstreet Wood sector left Pte Clifford in No Man's Land wounded and the Battalion holding the line said he he crawled in about two hours after the raid, but was never seen or went through the dressing station. When the patrols went out at night, Pte Clifford could not be found.' Report by Pte Treby; 'On 4th June ,1917 when raiding the enemy trenches near Messines No 523 Pte Clifford D.M. was wounded. He was told by the N.C.O. in charge of the party to go back to our own lines. He was seen to get over the parapet, but did not report back to any dressing station to my knowledge. The Battalion scouts searched the ground but could not find him.' Report by Sgt Poland; 'Clifford and about 30 other men went over in a bombing raid at Messines on June 4th, 1917. He was sniped in the German line and told his mates that he would be able to get back to our lines. He was never seen again. There was a heavy barrage on at the time. He was an Irishman about 5'11", dark heavy build, about 25 years of age.' Memorial: Villers-Bretonneux Memorial. Villers-Bretonneux Military Cemetery in France.

Enniscorthy Guardian, Nov, 1914; British Battleship blown up. Terrible loss of life, London, Thursday.

It was announced in the House of Commons this afternoon that the battleship 'Bulwark' was blown up in Sheerness Harbour this morning. Only twelve lives were saved. The 'Bulwark' was a battleship of fifteen thousand tons. She was completed in 1902 and re-commissioned at Chatham in June, 1912. She had a compliment of seven hundred and fifty men, and carried four twelve inch guns. The 'Bulwark' cost £997, 846. It is believed that the cause of the disaster was an internal magazine explosion, which rent the ship asunder. There was no upheaval of water, and when the smoke cleared, the ship had entirely disappeared. An inquiry into the affair will be held tomorrow.

Buried in an elm coffin with brass fittings on the same day he died by Reverend Father D O'Sullivan. 'Immediately upon receipt of a telegram from the landlord of the International Hotel, Killarney, notifying Pte Kinchington's death, a representative from the headquarters was sent to Ireland to make appropriate funeral arrangements. On his arrival, however, he learnt that, acting under instructions from a civilian Doctor, the landlord of the hotel had taken upon himself the responsibility of having the remains of Private Kinchington interred a few hours after his death. The explanation given by the landlord was that, as death was due to Septic Pneumonia in a malignant form immediate burial was due as a medical necessity. The landlord of the hotel and the doctor failed to notify the Military Authorities at Killarney of the death, and had it not been for the action of a few members of the Australian Imperial Force who were on leave in Killarney and heard of the funeral at the last moment the A.I.F. would not have been represented at the funeral. The following brothers of the late soldier were in touch thit these Headquarters throughout, Lieut. Patrick Kinchington, Empire Hotel, Vincent

Square, London, and No 6823 Pte Vincent Kinchington, 3rd Battalion, A.I.F. France; and one brother No 6823 Pte V Kinchington, has been granted facilities to proceed to Ireland to see his brothers grave upon which he will erect the standard cross this day.' A Commonwealth War Graves Commission headstone was erected over the grave in 1934. The original inscription on his headstone was to have been "Mild and gentle as he was brave, when the sweetest love of his life he gave, think of him still as the same I say, he is not dead—he is just away." This was shortened in 1922 to "Mild and gentle as he was brave, the sweetest love of life he gave."

From an article in the Enniscorthy Guardian, June 1915. Interesting Letter from the Front. Writing home to his parents at New Ross last week from the front, James Murphy of the Royal Engineers, and son of Mr James Murphy, Neville Street, New Ross, gives very interesting details. He has been at the front since the war commenced and has gone through several battles, having miraculous escapes on several occasions. Previous to joining the Royal Engineers he was a prison warder and his great mechanical knowledge quickly attracted the attention of the authorities of his Regiment and he was offered promotion in a comparatively short time., The following is part of his letter-

"Dear Parents-Even though many miles from you and on the battlefield, I don't forget you and never will. Distance or circumstance will never make me forget the affection I owe my parents, whose prayers are being offered each day for my welfare along with the prayers of my dear and beloved wife. I write to my dear wife every day to keep her in good spirits, and with a devoted love to her as my wife, and with God's help when the war is over we will all meet again, and I have made up my mind to spend my holidays with ye all, particularly as those holidays shall be the most enjoyable ones of my life, and away from the continuous roaring of weapons and spattering of shells, all of which I may say is second nature to me now. But give me peace, that beautiful peace that should always reign and which would be a blessing-one of the greatest blessings that ever came during our time from Almighty God. I attend Benediction every night since I have been out here, and go to Holy Communion every Sunday.

Conscription is not far off in my opinion, and it is time to pull a lot of the slackers out of their feather beds. I am sure the poor class have well contributed their position, and, dear parents, you can say that you have contributed one son who is in the thick of the fight. Germany will be beaten if it was to take us years to do it, and there shall be no surrender to the Kaiser and his outlaws. I can tell you straight he will get something this month that he has not got since the beginning of the war, and he will get something twice as hot in July and treble as hot in October, or maybe sooner, and before the New Year I am sure peace will shine o'er the earth again, and in my opinion the Kaiser will then be fast on his way back to where he came from (dust). May God send peace soon and dispose of the Kaiser as He wishes. We are not the Kaisers judge, and it is a good job he is not ours either. As the French man says, he is no bonn (no good). The writer gives some further interesting passages, and winds up by saying that he is in the best of health, and hopes to meet his parents, wife and child and his brothers and sisters when the war is over.

NASH. EDWARD RADCLIFFE, Capt, 16th Lancers. Elder son of Lieut-Col. Edward Nash of Ballycarty, Tralee, County Kerry and 56 Sloane Street, London, S.W., J.P., late Essex regiment, by his wife Constance, daughter of John Radcliffe of Moorfield, Withington, J.P. Born in London, 09-June-1888. Educated at Mr Bull's Preparatory School, Westgate-on-Sea (1898-1902), Eton (1902-July-1905), and Sandhurst, into which he passed in September, 1905 at the earliest possible age, giving up for the sake of seniority all that another two years at Eton would have meant to him. Gazetted 2nd Lieutenant, 16th Lancers, 29-August-1906 and promoted Lieutenant 15-January-1909 and Captain 10-October, 1914. Went to France with the Expeditionary Force in August-1914. Took part in the retreat from Mons, the battles of the Marne, and the Aisne, and the first battle of Ypres. Was killed in action near Ypres, 21-February-1915 when the 16th Lancers suffered severely through the blowing up of a trench. At the time of his death he was acting Adjutant of his regiment. Captain Nash was a splendid all-round sportsman. At Eton he distinguished himself as a long distance runner and as a "wet-bob," and in 1905 won the Junior Sculls and stroked his Junior House Four up to 'head,' the last time that the colors of Miss Evan's were seen on the river. While at Sandhurst he proved himself a remarkable athlete, winning against competitors considerably older than himself the equivalent of the "Vitor Ludorum" Cup. After joining the 16th Lancers, he ran twice in the Army Championship for the mile, being second on each occasion with practically no training, but he devoted himself chiefly to riding and was one of the finest horse-men in the Army. He was well known at Olympia, and was one of the team which represented Great Britain at the last Olympic Games at Stockholm in 1912. He was first and second in successive years at the Grafton Point-to-Point, won his Regimental Light Weight Steeplechase on two occasions, and was 'placed' at a number of other meetings at which he rode. As conspicuous for dash, energy and endurance in war as in sport, he was the ideal cavalry officer and appeared to have a distinguished career before him. His exuberant vitality found expression in all that he said or did, and one who knew him well observed, on hearing that he had been killed; "Of all the deaths in this war, his death is the hardest to realize." Captain Nash was mentioned in Sir John (now Lord) French's Despatch of 8 (London Gazette, 19) October-1914. His younger brother, Captain L.C. Nash, died of wounds 28-September following.

Rank: Second Lieutenant (Temporary Captain). Regiment or Service: King's Royal Rifle Corps.

Date of Death: 29-September-1915. Age at Death, 28.

Supplementary information; Son of Lt. Col. G. Nash, of 56, Sloane St., London.

From De Ruvigny's Roll of Honour;-

Nash, Llewellyn Charles, 2nd Lieutenant (Temporary Captain) 2nd Battalion, King's Royal Rifle Corps. Younger son of Lieut-Col Edward Nash, of Ballycarty, Tralee, County Kerry and 56 Sloane Street, S.W., J.P., late Essex regiment, by his wife, Constance, daughter of John Radcliffe of Moorfield, Withington, J.P. Born Cefn Lla, Usk, County Monmouth, 23-June-1895. Educated at Wixenford (Mr. Morton's), Eton Mr Hiss's House, January-1910-July-1914), and the Royal Military College, Sandhurst. Gazetted 2nd Lieutenant, 2nd King's Royal Rifle Corps, 11-November-1914 and Lieutenant 01-August-1915. Left for France in January-1915. Took part in the Battles of Neuve Chapelle and Festubert, was promoted Captain 12-July and died of wounds received in action near Vemrelles on the 25th, the first day of the Battle of Loos. He was wounded early in the morning of the 25th, but was not found until late in the afternoon, and one of his brother officers wrote; "The fact that we found him wounded almost through the German wire shows the splendid determination and courage with which he went forward." He was mentioned in despatches by F.M. Sir John French (London Gazette, 01-January-1916), and a General officer under whom he served wrote; "He was Battalion bombing officer and easily the best in the Division, and was constantly sent for when they wanted advice on the subject." Buried at Lozonghem, near Lillers. At Eton he was a Sergeant in the O.T.C., and a whip to the Beagles, and won the School Sculling in 1914, being ninth man of the Eight that year. In all branches of sport he was keen especially excelling as a fisherman. A writer in the King's Royal Rifle Corps Chronicle said; "To know 'The Fat Boy' as Nash was affectionately called was to love him. Always cheery and keen for work, he set a magnificent example to those under him. If he was in charge of a party working in the trenches he buckled to and worked harder than anyone else. At Eton he had the reputation of working his hardest at work or play, and this reputation he fully justified while he was in the Regiment. His character was eminently fitted for the stern combination of work and sport entailed by active service, and his success as a soldier is shown by the fact that at the age of 20, with less than a year's service, he had already been gazetted to the rank of Captain." His elder brother, Captain E.R. Nash, was killed in action near Ypres, 21-February-1915.

Home from the front.

His many friends in Portarlinton and in the R.I.C. at Kilmalogue were glad to see during the week Gunner Ed. R. Ryan, of the Garrison Artillery, who paid a visit to Portarlinton after his discharge from hospital where he has undergone treatment for injuries from shrapnel. He now looks fit and well and has returned to his station at Gosport, England. Driver Ryan was a member of the R.I.C. and stationed at Kilmalogue barracks at the outbreak of war. He and Constable Ormsby joined the 1st Battalion of the Irish Guards and nothing has been heard of him for some months although the most minute inquiries have been made by his friends. It is presumed he was killed in action.

A message from Otranto (Italy) says that three German warships are now in Valpariso Bay, Chili. Five more warships and auxiliaries are outside the bay. The Mounmouth was an armoured cruiser of 9,800 tons built at Glasgow at a cost of £979,000. She belonged to what is known as the County Class, and carried a crew of 537 men. . Her armoured belt was 4.2 inches of Krupp steel and her 14.6 inch guns were protected by 5.4 inches of steel and her secondary guns by four inches.

She was fitted with two torpedo tubes and had a speed of nearly 23 knots. The "Good Hope" is also an armoured cruiser, but much more heavily armoured and armed than the Monmouth. Her belt is six inches of Krupp steel. And her 9.2 inch guns are protected by 6.5 inches. She also carries 16 6-inch guns and 15 quickfirers. Her speed is over 23 knots and she has a crew of 900 men. The Monmouth was commissioned in July, 1914, under the command of Captain Frank Brandt. The Good Hope was commissioned in 1912, and carried the flag of Sir Christopher Cradock, K. C. V. O. Next of kin details; (widowed mother, husband has been dead many years) Mrs Michael Sheehan, also listed as Mrs E Sheehan, 155 Telford Street, Rockhampton, Queensland. Place and date of enlistment, 19-September-1914. Rockhampton, Queensland. Weight, 11st 6 lbs. Height, 5 feet, 9 ½ inches. Complexion, dark. Eyes, hazel. Hair, black. Listed as wounded and missing in the field. Buried ¾ mile east of Pozieres, 4 ½ miles north east of Albert, France. After a Court of Enquiry in March-1918 this was later changed to 'killed in action'. Served in Anzac,

Alexandria, Tel-El-Kabir, Heliopolis, Abbassia, Zeitoun, Marseilles, Etaples and France. The records as they stand seem to be mixed up with a Private James Herbert Davenport who served under the alias of SHEEHAN and Private Patrick Sheehan himself. In a document recording Pte Sheehan's exhumation it is written that this Pte 2423 Sheehan was an alias, his true name been Davenport J. H. A quick look in the CWGC shows the same J.H. Davenport served as Sheehan and the service number of 1417. From what I can see these two men have their records and information mixed up, they are buried in different cemeteries and they died 8 months apart. A quick look at J.H.Davenport's (Patrick Sheehan's, No 1417) records show he was born in Alice and not from Ireland. Grave or Memorial Reference: VIII. D. 22.
